VOLUME 18 MARCH 1995 NUMBER 3

TREASURER - SIGGI KLANN - 668-7679

EDITOR - IRV LOWEN - 832-6615

PRESIDENT'S NOTE

I must begin my note with bad news. Our editor, Irv, is in the Health Sciences Centre. He has suffered a stroke. As of this writing, he is not able to have visitors. The section he is in does not allow flowers or fruit; cards may be sent to him.

This is the last newsletter we are sending to those who don't pay dues for 1995. Dues are still $20.00.

Our next meeting is at 7:30 p.m. at the Woodhaven Park Community Club 200 Glendale, St. James, Tues. March 28.

The following item is an adaptation of Rudyard Kipling's "If". It was written by the editors of The Indian Magazine at sometime in the past.

THE MOTORCYCLIST'S "IF"

If you can spare the gas when those about you
Are twisting throttles for a show-off thrill,
And eat the smoke of others, when no doubt you
Could make them all eat yours without a spill,
If you can see an empty road before you
And know no cop is ever in sight,
Yet keep the law, though others may ignore you,
And know within your heart you are right:

If you can speed without making speed your master,
If you can race, though racings not your game,
But spurn the great temptation to go faster,
Lest others, less expert, should do the same.
If you can bear delay in traffic, waiting
Without the sounding of your motor like a gun;

Be blocked by clumsy fools, yet neither hating
Nor letting sunday drivers spoil your fun:

If you can have your sport, yet think of others,
Who get no joy from growl of open pipe,
Regard the natural fears of nervous mothers,
And cause no older citizen to gripe,
If you can start a club, and, once begun it
Keep rules like these on every outing run,
Yours is the road and all the sport upon it,
And-which is more-you'll be a Man, my son!
